Havana became, over 200 years ago, the most important and attractive city of the Caribbean and the Gulf of Mexico, enchanted city for its architecture.

Fronts with pilasters flanking double doors, halfpoint arches, columns, balconies, rafter and knuckle coffers, glazes and forges are elements of Havana architecture which have always seduced travelers. This architecture is also seen in several cities of the country. Though all styles left their insurmountable, historic, imprint, Cuban architecture manifested its own independence. The influence of styles and cultures can be seen in Havana’s colonial architecture, with an ample range of Arab, Spanish, Italian and Greek-latin. We assist to see a certain eclecticism, an adaptation to sensations and desires of the island.

Among these creole versions, stand out the portico with columns. And, less frequently, the arches that among other formulas, show a certain liberty, functionality and decorative simplicity.

It is considered that Cuban was America’s most complex and best presented architecture of the colonial era. Several Cuban historic colonial centers are recognized as World Heritage Sites and they stand out for their cultural and functional values while showing the greatest and most important architectural currents of the world.

Founded in 1514, the Village San Cristobal de La Habana obtained the title of city on December 1592 and in 1607 was recognized as official capital of the colony.
With an excellent geographic location, on the north coast of the Western region, Havana is the smallest province of the country. It has 15 municipalities and multiple residential suburbs. Its population exceeds two million inhabitants.

Havana is, at the same time, capital of the Republic of Cuba and the most cosmopolitan city of the country. From its first centuries it became the most important cultural center of the island. Diversity is the mark of Havana’s culture. Convergence of traditions of African, Spanish, some Chinese and Arab origin, among other recognizable influences, recognizable in everyday city life.

Havana offers surprising and unforgettable meetings, with history and architecture, both in museums and most emblematic sites. It also proposes tours and excursions ideal for a wholesome enjoyment.

We invite you to find authentic experiences.

Heritage

Cuban culture has in its urban and architectonic heritage qualifying elements of great value, that distinguish it in the regional and universal context. In Havana, stand out the historical center of Havana, which received in 1982 the condition of World Heritage by the UNESCO in recognition of its universal and exceptional value and allows the revival of the interest in persons that visit us, due to the great diversity of its architecture and urbanism, conserved with a high degree of authenticity.

The conservation of the historical center has been a priority of the Cuban State, centered in the Office of the Historian of Havana, who has conceived exceptional forms of sustainable management. Among these, the better use of tourism potentialities in a responsible way to dynamize local economy and generate well-being for the community.

Tourism is interpreted as a way to continue the great conservation and rescue work of the immense architectural and urban legacy present throughout the nation. We invite you to discover it.
It is very difficult to put into a few lines what is Cuban idiosyncrasy. In the big picture, it can be said that he/she is the result of the mixture of ethnias and diverse cultures that ended in creating a being and culture different from those that HAVANA is the most important tourism destination of the country. The modality of cultural tourism is predominant and has four important municipalities which gather the main attractions and tourism services. In this city thanks to its varied offer, you can practice other modalities of tourism like sun and beach, nautics, business, cruising, social interest tourism, weddings and honeymoons, among others.

Habana Vieja, stands out from the rest. It is home to the house where our National Hero Jose Marti was born, the historical center with its fortress system. It has an architectural wealth among the best conserved in America, besides the different squares built surrounded by churches, convents and cathedrals.

Plaza de La Revolución, district that hosts the most diverse cultural events, such as theater, movie festivals and folk activities. Among its attractions stand out La Rampa, where ice cream parlor Coppelia stands, the Cuba Pavillion and very nearby, the University of Havana.
gave birth to it. But it is clear that it is an incomplete and hurried definition. That’s why more than speak of Cuban idiosyncrasy it is best to speak about Cubans. And a Cuban may be described as: happy, chatty, funny, witty, always falling in love, argumentative, welcoming, generous, proud of his own, selfless. However, Cubans are also hyperbolic, joking, excessive. Enthusiastic and convinced there is no problem he cannot solve, even though frequently he finds a problem to each solution. Cubans are also noble, dignified and patriots. These are the main traits you will find in a visit through the island and, especially, among Havana dwellers. I invite you to meet them.

Centro Habana, in-between municipality between old and modern Havana. It has important avenues like Carlos III and famous places such as the Chinese Quarter and the Hammel Alley.

Playa, the most modern part of the city has Fifth Avenue and residences of contemporary architecture. The most important marina of the country is located there, the most significant convention center, the Palacio de Convenciones and world-renowned Cabaret Tropicana.
Morro Castle of the Three Kings

This fortress of great historic value and outstanding tourist and cultural attraction, is located on a crag, at the entrance of the port of Havana.

Its construction, ordered by King Felipe II, was begun in 1589 and completed in 1630. It is endowed with 12 cannons, each one with the names of apostles, guarding the entrance to the Port of Havana.

In the past, when the English tried to seize the city and Spain recovered it through the 1763 Treaty, a lighthouse was added to warn the population of any danger. In 1945 it was subject to actions of preservation, achieving since then an active cultural life that attracts a great amount of visitors.

The Castle has now two restaurants: The Twelve Apostles and the Divine Shepherdess, besides a bar, located in its ancient artillery batteries, where an extraordinary panorama of the Havana coastline may be seen.

Monuments and Fortresses

Castle of the Royal Force of Havana

O’Reilly Nº2 e/ Avenida del Puerto y Tacón, Old Havana.

The Castle of the Royal Force of Havana is the most ancient in Cuba. Its construction started on December 1, 1558, in the space occupied by the primitive Square of the Villa, in front of the entry channel to the bay, where the cabildo (townhall) the governor’s residence and houses of the main neighbors.

The castle’s ground floor is a square divided into nine equal parts that round off four regular bastions.

Surrounding it, is a moat limited by the perimetral wall. Its perfect symmetry reminds of Italian and French renaissance constructions of the 16th Century, although the volumes of the architectural mass and its isolation approach them to the medieval tradition.

As of 1588, expansions were begun in the upper story, destined to house governors and, towards 1630, a story was added to the tower on the angle of the south western bulwark. In that place was put as weather vane, La Giraldilla (statuette of an aristocratic lady). At present, this castle can be visited by the public in general.
Castle of St. Salvador de la Punta
Avenida del Puerto and Prado, Old Havana.

It is erected at the entrance of the Port of Havana, twinned from its origin with the Morro Castle of the Three Kings and the Castle of the Royal Force, being part of the defensive system of Havana. These three fortresses appear in the city’s coat of arms.

The design of the fortress goes back to the last decades of the 16th Century, a work of military engineer Bautista Antonelli. The construction was about to be stopped in several occasions due to economic impediments and contradictions between Antonelli and the authorities of the island; it was also subjected several times to structural modifications. After a capital repair, at the end of the 20th Century, the Museum of St. Salvador de la Punta was installed there. It was declared in 1982 World Heritage site together with the historical center and the system of fortresses of Havana.

Fortress of San Carlos de la Cabaña
East bank of the entry channel to Havana Bay.

During the attack of the English naval forces on Havana, it was the possession of the hill of La Cabaña by the British forces what facilitated the attack on the Morro Castle and the rest of the city until it surrendered.

When the Spanish recovered Havana, King Carlos III ordered to build a fortress in this site sparing no efforts. Under the direction of military engineer Silvestre Abarca, the fortress of San Carlos de la Cabaña began to be built and was completed in 1774. The strategic position, its link with the Morro fortress and the other 10 hectares it occupies made it the largest of the Island and the first in America.

Its design applying the most advanced concepts of military engineering of the 18th Century, is very complex due to the variety of its elements. During the wars of independence, La Cabaña served as a prison and its moat was a place for executions by firing squad. In the 20th Century, as the defensive nature of the fortress disappeared, it served as warehouse, lodging of troops and prison. Restoration works of La Cabaña started in 1986 in a coordinated project between the Ministry of the Revolutionary Armed Forces and the Office of the Historian of Havana to create the Historic Park Morro-Cabaña and the work was concluded in 1992. Today it has a Museum of Arms, hosting cultural and recreational activities, of which highlights the traditional ceremony of the Firing of a Cannon at 9 p.m., which every night can be appreciated by visitors.

El Templete
Baratillo and O’ Reilly, Old Havana

It is a site of marked historical nature, located in the Plaza de Armas of Old Havana, World Heritage site. Its construction goes back to 1828 and is, according to experts, the first construction of neoclassic style of Havana and one of the civilian constructions which has most influenced in Cuban architecture. This monument has the form of a Greek Doric temple and was inaugurated on March 19, 1828.

You can find it in the area occupied before the Plaza and Villa of San Cristobal de La Habana since its foundation in the north coast in 1519. This was perpetuated first by the commemorative Ceiba tree, then by the stone in the Cagigal Column (1754) and later, with the neoclassic shrine and its interior canvasses (1828). Such monuments bear witness that in this place, or very near it, took place the first mass and town hall session under the leafy tree.

Every year each eve of November 16, date of foundation of the city, the place witnesses a pilgrimage of hundreds of Havana dwellers who go round the tree three times and throw a coin at its roots, while in silence they make a wish.
Old Plaza
San Ignacio e/ Teniente Rey and Muralla, Old Havana

Founded at the end of the 17th Century, it became one of the main squares in the city for its commercial and social activity, as it was scenario of feasts and religious celebrations. Paradoxically it was called at the beginning “New Plaza” and later became Old Plaza when the Plaza del Cristo was built. Surrounding this square there are other sites of great value and tourist interest: the Dark Chamber, the Fodo Cubano de Bienes Culturales headquarters, a small brewery and the hotel Conde Villanueva.

At the center of the square, a fountain was built at the beginning of the 18th Century. By the middle of the 19th Century, it was removed and placed in the Paseo del Prado. The fountain presently found in the square is made of Carrara marble and sculped by Giorgio Massari.

Plaza of San Francisco de Asís
Oficios and Amargura, Old Havana

The Plaza of San Francisco de Asís took its name from the primitive convent of this religious order built in one of its corners at the end of the 16th Century. Its formation follows the expansion of the population that followed the bay coastline.

It always had a commercial nature, close to the docks, served the navys so they collected water and was the deposit of merchandises unloaded at the port. It acquired its definitive appearance in 1628, when it is drained and refilled its space, becoming the main center of mercantile activity of the villa.

During the government of the Marquis de la Torre (1771-1776) the paving of the Oficios street was carried out. Under the government of Tacon (1836-1838) the Fountain of the Lions was put in its center, donated to Havana by the Count of Villanueva.

In the 19th Century it was witness to transformations that benefitted the docks and its space enjoy dan expansion and beauty.
Cathedral Plaza
Empedrado e/ San Ignacio and Mercaderes, Old Havana.

This square is formed by a group of elegant houses of the aristocracy centuries ago and is the top expression of the baroque period of colonial architecture that with its religious solemnity characterized the place.

During the 17th Century and most of the 18th, it was known as Little Square of the Swamp, due to the rain waters that used to drain from the city to the bay. The Cathedral Plaza has been scenario of diverse events of historic, political and social nature. Until our days, artisans, retailers, creators of all manifestations of art and literature, gather there, considered the most attractive and harmonious of the continent.

Plaza of Arms
Tacón e/ Obispo and O’Reilly, Old Havana.

First square built in the ville of San Cristobal de la Habana. It was known as Square “of the church” and its purpose was mainly commercial and public affairs.

At the end of the 16th Century, it acquired its definitive form, between the Royal Force fortress and the ancient church Parroquial Mayor. After the construcción of the Royal Force fortress it was used for military drills and was named Plaza of Arms, with which it lost its public nature. Since its erection, it was a place of meetings for the inhabitants of the ancient villa and was surrounded by its fundamental institutions. Today the Plaza de Armas continues to be the heart of the ancient city.

Plaza of the Revolution

Originally called Plaza Cívica (Civic Plaza), its construction, started through a contest, was completed in 1959. It presents a base in the form of a star, it has a great obelisque 109 meters high with a viewpoint that became the highest point in the city and also in the front stands a marble statue of Jose Marti. In the base there is the Memorial Jose Marti, space dedicated to deepen into the life and work of our national hero. It has four permanent exhibition halls and a transition one where political and cultural activities take place. At the front on the other side of the square is the Ministry of the Interior, whose front shows the famous image of Che from a picture taken by photographer Korda and another similar sculpture of Camilo Cienfuegos by famous Cuban painter, designer, sculptor and engraver Enrique Avila, that exhibits the Ministry of Information Technology and Communications. Very near there is also the National Library José Martí, as well as other ministries. The plaza gets its fame after the triumph of the Revolution, as it was exceptional witness of relevant events occurred in Cuba and permanent tribune of its people.
Parks

Central Park
Paseo del Prado, Old Havana.

Located in the space of three colonial little squares and the ancient park of Isabel II, later called Paseo del Prado, this park is surrounded by traditional hotels such as Inglaterra, Plaza, Telegrafo and the modern Central Park, as well as important buildings such as the Manzana de Gomez, movie theater Payret and the National Museum of Fine Arts.

In its center you will find the first statue made to Jose Martí in 1905, work of Cuban sculptor Jose Vilalta Saavedra and made of marble from Carrara. It is one of the most visited places by Havana dwellers for its leafy trees and palms, allowing to enjoy the shade and joyful daily discussions on sports, the most important of the country, deportiva más importante del país.

Paseo del Prado

Su primer nombre fue el de Alameda de Extramuros o de Isabel II y se extiende desde la Fuente de la India y la Plaza de la Fraternidad hasta Malecón. Fue construido en 1772. En el hay ocho estatuas de leones, hechas de bronce que parecen custodiar el paseo.

En todo su recorrido podemos apreciar el antiguo Campo de Marte, hoy Parque de la Fraternidad, el Teatro Tacón, en la actualidad Gran Teatro de La Habana, sede permanente de la Ópera y el Ballet Nacional de Cuba. Y al final las ruinas del antiguo Edificio de la Cárcel.

Está dividido en cuatro secciones fundamentales bien delimitadas: el Paseo, el Parque Central, la Explanada del Capitolio y la Plaza o Parque de la Fraternidad.
Havana Forest
In the 20s of last century, the idea of building a park at the Banks of the Almendares River was studied and to that end, authorities invited the then curator of Paris parks, French urbanist Jean Claude Nicolas Forrestier, to make a project. The original project conceived a great national park that expanded 2010 hectares.

In the zone near the Almendares bridge, Park Almendares was built, with picnic areas, a children’s park and several outdoor facilities. At present, the Havana Forest is part of an enormous Project called Metropolitan Park, that extends to 678 hectares and includes the Playa, Plaza de la Revolucion, Cerro and Marianao municipalities.

It is located in the seven last kilometers of the Almendares river and has many botanical species varieties. This forest is considered the green lung of Havana.

National Botanical Garden
Carretera del Rocío, kilómetro 3, Arroyo Naranjo.

The dream to build a green cathedral in the capital was a reality on March 24, 1984, when the National Botanical Garden opened its doors to the public. Natural exhibition center, the Garden shows representatives of the Cuban flora and the rest of the world tropics. It is an educational, scientific and recreational institution of some 600 hectares organized in phitogeographic zones, with special collections, expo pavilions, laboratories, nurseries, a forest dedicated to Martí, a herbarium, a vegetarian restaurant El Bambú, as well as recreational areas. This center promotes knowledge of tropical vegetable biodiversity, particularly the autochthonous flora besides the importance of its conservation through environmental education actions, being this its essential objective.

The Cuban National Botanical Garden is, undoubtedly, a very interesting and special place that allows us to be in direct contact with the majestic universe of plants.

Lenin Park
Calle100 y Cortina de la Presa, Arroyo Naranjo.

It has an extension of 745 hectares. It is a crowded place, mostly on weekends and summer months of July and August. It offers facilities for bike, horse rides and aboard a steam locomotive or enjoy a picnic by the shade of flamboyans and other leafy species that make it a vital part of the city green lungs. Founded on April 22, 1972, it has several restaurants, small outlets of light food, fun park, swimming pools, rodeo show and art galleries, among other facilities.
Fair Ground Expocuba
Carretera del Rocío, kilómetro 3, Arroyo Naranjo.

“IN EXPOCUBA WE HELP YOU TO KNOW CUBA”
That is the slogan that identifies the largest fair and exhibition grounds. It was inaugurated on January 4, 1989 and shows the achievements of the country in all spheres.

Important national and international events have Expocuba as venue all throughout the year; in November, the Havana International Fair as the most important.

An advantageous trait of its location, is being in front of the National Botanical Garden and in the vicinity of Lenin Park and the National Zoo.

National Zoo
Carretera Capdevila y Caminosur Final. Boyeros

Located in a topographically varied zone, it is different from other parks in the country because animals, whose life style allows it, coexist in communities free of bars.

Among the most popular areas of the Park is the Fosse of Lions, a depression with big trees, crags and caves, as well as the Grand African Prairie. This has lakes for hippopotamus, as well as other nearby extensions in which coexist giraffes, zebras, antelopes, rhinoceros and other species of the African continent. It is considered by some as a corridor of migratory birds and occupies fifth place among those zones in Cuba.

National Aquarium
Calle 3ra e/60 y62, Miramar, Playa

The National Aquarium of Cuba is a specialized scientific center in research, environmental education and the spreading of information on the maritime environment, its flora, fauna and ecology. Its main objective is to raise the culture and education about the care, conservation and rational use of the sea, the coasts, and its resources. It opened to the public on January 23, 1960.

It actually has a dolphinary with capacity for 1200 visitors and eight dolphins working simultaneously, and another amphitheater to show demonstrations with seals with capacity for 1000 spectators. There are underwater exhibitions of dolphins and harmonic demonstrations with their trainers. There is also a specialized restaurant for 120 guests.
Christ of Havana
Loma de Casablanca, town across the Bay

At the entrance of the port of Havana, between the fortress of San Carlos de la Cabana and the town of Casablanca, emerges a colossal statue known as the Christ of Havana. It was inaugurated on December 25, 1958 and is one of the three statues of Jesus Christ erected in the world. It was sculpted in Italy showing a standing Jesus, with one hand on his chest and the other one up in a blessing attitude, it looks over the city and has a height of 20 meters over the base of three meters. It weighs 320 tons and is made up of 67 pieces of white Carrara marble. The work belongs to Cuban sculptress Gilma Madera. If we add the splanade over the hill where the statue is located, its height rises to 51 meters over sea level, allowing for it to be seen from different points of the city.

Beaches of the East

The Beaches of the East, located only 25 kilometers from the Cuban capital, are a site of unique beauty to relax and enjoy the tropical charms. Bacuranao, Tarará, Mégano, Santa María del Mar, Boca Ciega and Guanabo, form a coastline of beaches with plenty of sand and crystal waters. Its coral reefs, near to the coast, favor the practice of snorkeling and deep-sea diving. The visitor has at hand multiple places where to rest, refresh with a cold drink and enjoy the sea breeze, besides having the possibility to lodge in hotels, apparthotels and villas. Among the options there is the Atlantico Hotel, Apparthotel Las Terrazas, Tropicoco, Villa Playa Hermosa, among others. Bars and cabarets at night offer varied shows for different tastes.

An exceptional charm of Beaches of the East is its closeness to the capital, putting in the hands of visitors a permanent portfolio of outings, tours and excursions to the city.

The Capitol

Paseo del Prado e/ Dragones and San Martín, Old Havana.

The majestic neo-classic building was inaugurated on May 20, 1929 and marks kilometer 0 of the roads of the country. Its dome is of renaissance style. It was designed to host the two chambers of parliament of the Republic, which sessioned there until the end of the 50s and in its halls met the Constituent Assembly of 1940 which proclaimed the Constitution of the Republic that same year. The statue of the Republic of Cuba located in the main hall of the Capito is the third tallest indoor statue of the world.
Handicraft Fair at Old San Jose Warehouses

Ancient warehouses San Jose—at the Havana docks—opened its doors to handicraft lovers. Considered the oldest dock of the Havana waterfront, this dock offers a beautiful panorama from inside the bay of Havana.

At the avenue of the Port, in front of the Paula church, artisans of the city have an ideal site to exhibit and commercialize their work, while by ancient railroad tracks rescued by archaeologists, a train will offer visitors the possibility of making a magical tour of the Alameda de Paula.

The Cathedral of Havana

Empedrado e/ San Ignacio and Mercaderes, Old Havana

Its construction began in the year 1748 as Jesuit church and became the Grand Parish Church in 1777, while some years later, in 1788, it became Cathedral of Havana.

Its baroque style is given, not by the sculpted ornaments, but by the movement of the façade, curved walls at both sides of the central door, the use of ondulating, uneven lines, the presence of draped columns and the use of spirals in the cornice that are also points of departure for the decoration of doors of many Havana residences in that time.

Its interior, roofed originally by wooden vaults, was covered in the 19th Century with a covering in plaster, simulating gothic vaults decorated following the style of European churches. The original floor was made of stone slabs, characteristic of the 18th Century and in 1820, it was replaced by marble. The Cathedral of Havana keeps many secrets that are being discovered in time. In this church there are ancient graves, the signatures of thousands of hands on the walls, reminders of slavery and art.

The Bodeguita del Medio

Empedrado Nº 207, Old Havana

One of the most famous restaurants of Havana, it has been visited many and important guests, from writers to sportspeople. They all have left their imprint in that space by pictures, objects, graffiti on its walls. Here you will find a typically creole menú, accompanied by a delicious mojito cocktail and a superb habano or Havana cigar.
Lonja del Comercio (Trade Center)
Lamparilla No. 2, Plaza San Francisco de Asís

It is an office building in the center of Old Havana. Its construction began in 1907 and ended in 1909. It is ranked as one of the most outstanding projects of the first years of the 20th Century in Cuba.

Of an eminently renaissance and eclectic style. Its façade shows a very varied decoration. Atop the dome was placed a bronze statue featuring Mercury, Greek god of trade, visible from the distance. In 1995, it was refurbished and its spaces conditioned to host elegant and comfortable offices equipped with the requirements of modern times.

Cigar Factory Partagas
Industria Nº 520, e/Dragones and Barcelona, Central Havana.

Its construction responds to the boom of the tobacco industry in the second half of the 20th Century. It has a simple expression on the outside, corresponding to the image that became common back then: a strong and massive presence, regular distribution of longitudinal openings with borders and dusters in the façade, also long balconies with iron handrails. The motive most attractive are the wings of baroque reminiscence on the parapets of both blocks. The year 1845 on the façade fixes the date in which the cigarette brand Partagas was founded, having this building of the 20th Century as its headquarters.

El Floridita
Corner of Monserrate and Obispo Streets, Old Havana.

It is a bar restaurant, one of the Havana sites immortalized by Ernest Hemingway. It offered him refuge and there he conversed with many friends including fellow countrymen who traveled to Havana to visit him. He practically created a special cocktail named after him, the “Papa Double” or “Hemingway Special”.

Havana, Hub City | 19
Grand Theater of Havana
Alicia Alonso
Paseo del Prado, at the corner of San Rafael (Boulevard of Havana), Old Havana.

It is one of the biggest opera theaters of the world. It is built on the foundations of ancient New or Tacon Theater and its façade is decorated with four sculptor groups representing Charity, Education, Music and Theater.

It has three halls, the main one named after Federico Garcia Lorca, it also has art galleries and conference romos. This building is host to the National Ballet of Cuba and stages the main opera performances as the National Lyric Theater, representing zarzuelas (Folk operas) and operettes.

Among the main events celebrated there are the Havana International Ballet Festival and the Festival The Imprint of Spain.

Numerous world renowned companies have performed here like the Royal Ballet of London, the Royal Ballet of Winnipeg, the Antonio Gades Ballet, the Ballet of the Colon Theater of Buenos Aires, the Folkloric Ballet of Mexico, among others.

Museum of the Revolution
Calle Refugio Nº1, e/Monserrate and Zulueta, Old Havana.

Clearly symbolic, the museum occupies the building where once housed the Presidential Palace since it was opened in 1920 by president Menocal until it became the refuge of dictator Fulgencio Batista in the 50s of the last century. Its more than 30 exhibition halls treasure about 9 000 pieces of different scenarios of the Independence struggle. The exhibition halls cover each stage of Cuban history. In the museum there are holograms of the actions of March 13, 1957 when the Palace was attacked by revolutionary youths, mostly University students attempting to overthrow the dictator. Also in a crystal mausoleum there is the yacht Granma, aboard which sailed in 1956 from Tuxpan (Mexico), Fidel Castro and his men to form the guerrillas in the Sierra Maestra mountains to carry out the revolutionary struggle.

To enter the Museum of the Revolution and tour its corridors is to navigate in the history of this heroic nation. The amount and value of its collections, together with constant cultural, historic and political activities it organizes, make of this the most important museum of history of the country.
Bacardí Building
Ave. de Bélgica No. 261 e/ Empedrado and San Juan de Dios, Old Havana.

It was commissioned by the rum company Bacardi S.A. and is considered a jewel of the Art Deco style. It was built in 1930 and at this time it was the highest building in the city.

Its structure is of steel and concrete. The façade is of natural granite, terracotta and pressed bricks. Its form is made up by a central section that goes up in the form of steps until it reaches a tower with a cover that identifies it, on top of which a figure of a bat in bronze that is the symbol of the company, sustained by a glass polyhedron with metal armor that is illuminated from inside by night.

It was decorated on the outside with red wine marble, simulating the color of the rum sugar-cane syrup, while on the higher stories Slabs of ceramic clay of brilliant yellow color, representing the rums from white to golden that were the ones which gave world fame to Bacardi rums.

National Museum of Fine Arts
Trocadero St. e/ Zulueta and Monserrate, Old Havana.

When it was built in 1854, it was one of the biggest and most functional of its type in all the western hemisphere. Born on February 23 of 1913 as National Museum, it treasures important collections, among which those of greatest value are works of Cuban painters, European art and ancient paintings, mainly those of Egyptian and Greek Latin origin.

From the valuable heritage of the museum stand out Cuban paintings that go from the 17th Century to our days, of authors of the stature of Victor Patricio Landaluce, Federico Martinez, Leopoldo Romañach, Esteban Chartrand, Armando Menocal, Victor Manuel, Eduardo Abela, Carlos Enríquez, Wifredo Lam and René Portocarrero.

The collection of European artists presents works of Goya, Velasquez, Zurbaran, Murillo, Van Miers, Hans Memling, among others.
Malecón, the Havana Seafront

One of the most popular avenues of Havana, el Malecón is the avenue along the capital’s seafront, extending from the Castle of the Point at the entrance of the bay until the Chorrera, at the estuary of the Almendares river, in all some seven kilometers long.

It is the ideal place at sunset time, that dives into the ocean on the west and provides spectacular views for all those who visit it. Between the Malecon and the sea there is a wide sidewalk and a wall as long as the avenue bordering the coast. This wall is visited by hundreds of youths and not so young, all through the day and night, some trying their luck in fishing, others to express their love or simply to escape the daily routine and feel the fresh sea breeze. In summer locals and visitors can enjoy the Havana Carnival.
El Callejón de Hamel (Hamel Alley)
e/Aramburu y Hospital, Cayo Hueso, Central Havana.

This is an alley where a community cultural Project has been developed since 1990 and which constitutes a unique outdoors museum of art of African origin, located in the heart of the Cayo Hueso neighborhood, which has become a must for visitors, lovers of street rumba, African religions and art.

Hamel is also a meeting with painting, has the first mural on the street, 100 meters long, made by self-taught artist Salvador Gonzalez, dedicated to Afro-Cuban culture.

You can visit the alley every day and on Sunday from midday, the alley welcomes hundreds of visitors and starts a session of Cuban rumba.

University of Havana
San Lázaro y L, borderline between Central Havana and Vedado.

On January 5, 1728, the Convent of San Juan de Letran is built hosting the first Cuban university, the Royal and Pontifical University of San Geronimo of Havana. At the inaugural ceremony is announced that Fray Tomas Linares del Castillo has been appointed as first rector, who would lead the first faculties of: Arts, Philosophy, Theology, Mass canons, Law and Medicine.

After a process of reforms, the University becomes a secular institution and 1850 changes its name for Royal and Literary University of Havana. In this second stage deepens its scientific development. To that end, is founded the Natural History Museum and the National Botanical Garden passes to be rectored by the institution. By that time, the educational center had the faculties of Jurisprudence, Medicine, Surgery and Pharmacy.

Figures like Carlos Manuel de Céspedes, Antonio Bachiller and Morales, Felipe Poey, Francisco de Arango and Parreño, passed through its classrooms. The university contributed to forge thinking and patriotic commitment to the new generations.

On May 1, 1902, begins the transfer of the university to the Arostegui Hill, also known as the “Hill of pyrotechnics”, located in Vedado.

At present, the University of Havana has an admission of 60 thousand students distributed in 17 faculties and 15 municipal branches. In this school-year 32 careers are studied.

LaRampa
Calle23, from L to Infanta Streets, Vedado. PlazadeLaRevolución

Urban strip located in the most centrical part of the city. Its name is defined by the inclination taken by the street in its five blocks, from L and 23 streets to Malecon. Its sidewalks show paintings of Cuban artists famous the world over, so it turns this stretch in a walking museum. Going in the direction of Malecon from L Street, it has at its left the movie theater Yara, cinema cultural center and subvenue of the International Film Festival of Havana. Following down to N street is the Pabellon Cuba, expo cultural center which hosts events like the Fair Art in La Rampa, subvenue to the Book Fair and the Cuban Videoclip Festival.

Before arriving at Malecon you find the headquarters of Cuban Institute of Aeronautics and host to many international airlines. At the top of the hill in L and 23 there is the Hotel Tryp Habana Libre. Down between N and O streets you can find night clubs El Karabali, Jazz Club la Zorra y el Cuervo and finally, movie theater La Rampa.

El Callejón de Hamel (Hamel Alley)
e/Aramburu y Hospital, Cayo Hueso, Central Havana...

This is an alley where a community cultural Project has been developed since 1990 and which constitutes a unique outdoors museum of art of African origin, located in the heart of the Cayo Hueso neighborhood, which has become a must for visitors, lovers of street rumba, African religions and art.

Hamel is also a meeting with painting, has the first mural on the street, 100 meters long, made by self-taught artist Salvador Gonzalez, dedicated to Afro-Cuban culture.

You can visit the alley every day and on Sunday from midday, the alley welcomes hundreds of visitors and starts a session of Cuban rumba.
Scale Model of Havana
Street 28 Nº 103 e/ 1st and 3rd Avenues, Miramar, Playa

It derived from a project that started in 1987 and was conceived as instrument for urban planning of the capital. It is built to scale 1:1000, it covers a total area of 144 square meters, equivalent to 144 square kilometers of representation. It is formed by 39 panels. Its total dimension is of 22 meters long by 10 meters wide. It weighs six metric tons.

Together with its similars of New York, Shanghai and Peking, this is one of the world’s largest. For the best atmosphere of this work, the different historic stages are taken into account (differentiated through a code of colors) and the transformation the city has suffered. The visitor can see each detail, thanks to several telescopes it has to draw things nearer.

The House of the Green Tiles
Street 2 Nº 308, between 3rd and 5th Avenues, Miramar, Playa

At the entrance of 5th Avenue in Miramar, there is one of the city houses that are example of the domestic architecture chalet style of the beginning of the 20th Century, with great influence from United States cottages.

Built in the year 1926, it suffered throughout time changes in its interior. It is surprising for its volume and geometric figures that intertwine in its façade, crowned by an inclined cover with attic-like windows and a small tower with the shape of a cone that gives it great beauty to this place.

Its roofs exaggeratedly sloped and covered by green tiles that distinguish it in an environment of big mansions.

After a restoration process, the house opens up as a promoting center of modern and contemporary architecture, urbanism and interior design.
Colon Cemetery

Streets Zapata and 12, Vedado, Plaza de la Revolución.

The first stone was laid on October 30, 1871 and before its expansion finished in 1934, it had an area of 504,458.22 square meters. Of rectangular form as a romantic-byzantine Roman camp, with sidewalks, streets and numbered roads, facilitates access to the visitor (which in republican times the person was provided with a free map).

The square located in the central street, between the chapel and the enormous door was called Cristopher Columbus because it was planned to erect a monument to the discoverer together with his remains, which ironically never passed from the Havana Cathedral, being the first bust erected in all the continent (1828) and the only one in the world where he appears with a beard.

Thus the cemetery dedicated to the Great Admiral, full of famous sculptures, lacks one of the man who gave name to this graveyard.

This necropolis is full of curious epitaphs, like the slab with a domino carved on it “Double Three” because an old lady fan of this game lost with that number in her hand.

Full of myths and legends like that of the Miraculous One, where rests Amelia Goyride Adot, who passed away in 1901 at the moment of giving birth. The grave has a statue of a woman with a baby in her arms holding to a cross.

Fifth Avenue, Miramar, Playa.

It is the axis of Miramar, and undoubtedly the most elegant avenue in Havana. Around her the rich citizens of the country in the Republican stage built their particular retirement. Today it has become an ideal zone for tourism recreation, with numerous hotels, restaurants, show theaters, an aquarium and retail outlets of local and international products. It also offers other visits of interest like the Church Jesus of Miramar, one of the most important of the city.
Community Marina Hemingway
Street 248 and 5th Ave. Santa Fe, Playa

It combines city hotels with nautical sports services. Inside you can enjoy all the facilities needed by a visitor: varied restaurants, stores, pools, night clubs, game halls, among other options.

Its port, with channels well equipped for docking and provisioning of the boats, it owes most of its fame to being the permanent venue of the International Marlin Fishing Contest Ernest Hemingway, held each year and created in the decade of the 50s in life of the novelist.

Cabaret Tropicana
Street 72 and Railroad Line, Marianao.

The world famous Cabaret, identified by its great arch, built in 1939 in the ancient land of the farm Villa Mina, but it is not until 1940 that it adopted today’s musical name.

Tropicana is located in a kind of forest with big trees like the Royal Palm. Symbol of this Havana spot, is the sculpture of a dancer made in 1950 by Cuban artist Rita Longa, and of lesser importance is the Fountain of the Muses, of Italian artist Aldo Gamba, which was installed in 1952 at the entrance of the cabaret.

In its main salon “Under the Stars”, one of the most legendary sites of Havana, offers shows that sometimes imply the participation of a hundred artists among dancers and musicians. It has a capacity for one thousand persons and it also has other spaces like the restaurant The Gardens and the bohemian Café Rodney, among others.

In 1992, the U.S. Academy of the Restaurant Industry gave Tropicana the award of Best of the Five Stars Diamond to the best cabaret of the Americas.

Religious institutions and fraternal associations

Cuba is known to present a peculiar religious diversity in which no specific creed is predominant. The most common beliefs and religious practices are identified as popular religiousness and are a result of the mixture and cultural synthesis that has formed Cuban nationality.

Messages, Postal Service

In all Havana there is a great amount of post offices, but for tourists, hotels sell stamps and have mailboxes where to put your correspondence. Hotel mailboxes are not picked up as often as those in post offices, so the convenience will mean some delay, although not much.

You will also have other options if you need message services like DHL, Cubapost and Cubapak.

If you need Message Services you can contact:

DHL world courier
Calle 26 esq. a 1ra, Miramar, Playa.
Tel: [53 7] 7204 1578, 7204 1876

Cubapost National and International Messages
Calle P No. 108, Vedado, Plaza de la Revolución.

Public Telephones

Public telephones in Havana are everywhere. There are phones to call with prepaid magnetized cards, which you can buy in hotels, information centers (Infotur) and other tourist establishments at different prices, according to the funds you want to spend. In hotel receptions they give you that service and, in many cases, you can Access out directly from your room without needing to contact the operator.

International Calls

If you want to make an international call you should dial 119 (out of Cuba) following the prefix of the country you are calling and finally the number you want to call.

Calling Cuba

If you want to call Cuba you have to dial the number out of your country, following 53 (code of entry to Cuba) – that the prefix corresponding to the locality finally the number you want to contact.

Calling Provinces

If you have arrived in Cuba and have the need to communicate with some province of the country, you will dial 0 and after that the code of the locality to which you are calling and finally, the number you want to contact.

To tour Havana streets and other places of interest, have in mind:
The use of light, informal, light-colored clothing and preferably cotton in daytime, adequate to the average temperatures of this region. Wear a more formal and elegant dress and suit for night activities mainly in cabarets, restaurants and theaters.

If the visit takes place in the months of December, January or February, it is recommended the use of jersey or light coat.

Use sunglasses, antisolar cream and repellant for mosquitoes if you go on excursión to the beach or rural zones.

In Havana, as well as in the rest of the country, there is a system of urban buses that link the main streets and avenues inside the city and with suburban zones.

¿How to get one’s bearing around Havana?
In the old zones of Havana, most of the streets have a patronimic denomination, while in Vedado, Miramar and others of more recent construction the streets are numbered.

Frequently, addresses come with the name or number of the Street, the number of the house or building and the two streets that limit the block where it is located.
